Feuerblau children's theater: I have a little problem, said the bear

🕒 Friday 15:00 o'clock

A story with a lot of humor about true friendship and about listening. A play in which acting, composition and shadow theater meet in combination with live camera.

Description

The three little capybaras Emmy, Tristan and Raul are good friends and live together with their herd in a meadow at the zoo. The three friends wonder whether there is more outside their enclosure than they can see and what might lie behind the fence. With courage, skill and a bit of luck, they manage to overcome the barrier and explore the “more” and the world around them. On their nightly excursions, they get to know the neighboring animals and experience exciting and funny adventures.

The bear has a small problem, but everyone he wants to tell has a solution for him beforehand: he gets wings from the inventor, red shoes from the shoe salesman and pills from the doctor - but no one is interested in what the bear actually wants. But then a small, inconspicuous fly appears ...

Based on the children's book of the same name by Heinz Janisch - “... poetic and humorous ... a wonderful realization ...” Heinz Janisch about the production

Theater Feuerblau was founded in 2013 by Monika Zöhrer and Klaus Seewald and stands for contemporary, critical and professional theater. Their current productions are on tour throughout Austria and they have also performed in Albania, Germany, Italy, Great Britain, Macedonia, Romania, Russia and Serbia. The group has developed its own theater language and is constantly working on it. It combines bodies, objects, puppet theater, dance, music, stage design, video and lighting design with the aim of creating a sensual theater experience.
